Paper is like a complex yet reliable friend, the paper changes the life of the human beings, in ancient days paper is used as sheet to write the script. The paper has many uses they are used for many things, for artists they are used as painting sheets; they are used in banks, collages, schools, offices, etc. Now a days in this generation there were computers but in the olden days there were only papers in which the work was done. Without the paper there was nothing in this world. Paper is a greatest thing for a human being, paper may have limitations but using the paper in limit gives unlimited results since its invention, paper has literally written itself into our history and our lives paper has given us many gifts and continues to give us much enjoyment.

As the world is advancing rapidly, everything is becoming digital. From our shopping to news, we can easily do it on our smartphones or computers. This digitization has also affected the newspaper scenario. As people are getting instant updates on their phones about the latest news, the sales of newspapers have gone down massively.

Does this mean the digital era will wipe out the newspapers? Looking at the present scenario, this possibility might soon become a reality. However, are we ready to have a world without newspapers? A world without newspapers is like having a home without mirrors. This means we won't be able to see our own reflection.

Historical Context of Paper

It is widely agreed that paper was invented by the Chinese in 105AD during the Han Dynasty papers popularity spread slowly to the west via Samarkand and Baghdad. Paper making started India 13th century by Arab Merchants, the creation of Newspaper, Periodicals, Magazine and Book to share knowledge. Allowing communication among people separated by distance – letter writing.

Now, compare this situation to that of the world and newspaper. Imagine the world has lost its national mirror, resulting in you not being able to get an honest reflection of what is happening around. What's even worse is the fact that instead of the national mirror we are getting a fun-house mirror which is distorting the information and making you see what's not real.

Conclusion

Because it is made from recycled paper it is easy to decompose in the environment combined with being reused many times the use of environment paper bags and recycling helps to reduce the demand for paper, thus preserving the natural forest.
